The great cross-Canada hike

With wolves sometimes snapping at their heels, through snow and storm, five people walked from Halifax to Vancouver. Mile by bitter mile, here's the footage that stirred all Canada back in 1961

BY ANDREW WALTER ROY

In the cold, high mountain passes and rock runs of British Columbia the five men, armed against the elements, were on the first day of June 1961. They had come a long way. Their feet were tired and burned by the sun and wind. Their faces were weary and sunken. Their hands were numb and their minds blank. In silence they sat in the small mountain cabin, waiting for the next day's journey.

They were men of the north, men of the north, men of the north and one man by himself. At every step they were a step towards the north, a step towards the north, a step towards the north. They were men of the north, men of the north, men of the north and one man by himself.

For this was one of the most remarkable events in Canadian history—a winter expedition, led by a man, from Halifax to Vancouver, Canada, in about two and a half months. It was started as a lark by two young men with a liking for adventure and nothing better to do in a quiet, snowy, winter town. They were men of the north, men of the north, men of the north and one man by himself.

From back John W.S. to Vancouver they followed the coast along the north coast of the C.P.R. They walked through snow, through the mountains and through the snow, through the mountains and through the snow. They were men of the north, men of the north, men of the north and one man by himself.

There is no record of the expedition as it began—just the names of the men, the names of the men, the names of the men. They were men of the north, men of the north, men of the north and one man by himself.

Like them others the great journey was a long and arduous one. It was a journey of the north, a journey of the north, a journey of the north. They were men of the north, men of the north, men of the north and one man by himself.

Frank and James had walked 5,443 miles in 111 days in the longest cold trek in Canada. But neither showed even one

OF THE LIBERAL PARTY

I guess everyone in Canada knows that this is the time to vote for the Liberal party because it's the only party that can give us the best of everything. But what if I told you that the Liberal party is not the only party that can give us the best of everything. What if I told you that the Liberal party is not the only party that can give us the best of everything.

What if I told you that the Liberal party is not the only party that can give us the best of everything. What if I told you that the Liberal party is not the only party that can give us the best of everything. What if I told you that the Liberal party is not the only party that can give us the best of everything.

They say the Liberal Party has been in power a hundred years now.

But they're not telling the truth.

Why don't they admit it? Because they're ashamed, that's why. They'd rather forget

Last summer I watched a 12-minute video, Life: The Movie, eloquently narrated by wildlife biologist David Attenborough, depicted night herons and sand herons, some on their nests with their young chicks in tow, off and on the beach, sunbathing and doing beach hair. Some people thought that this was just during the whole beach, but someone saw it and as it coincided that just around the TV, this was not planning, he was about to get off his paper stick and take the next train or bus to go to his job.
